

Ex-special education teacher reveals that midlife crisis begins in kindergarten!

Author of
"Discover Your Child's Learning Style"
tells your audience:

- How traditional education can destroy your child's self-worth & what to do about it
- How to coach your child for success in the real world
- Why labels like Dyslexia and ADD damage our most creative/inventive students
- How to get your child excited about wanting to learn
- Why you need to stop looking at what's wrong with your child & focus on what's right with your child
- How our grading system rewards rote memorization rather than true learning
- Why "No Child Left Behind" will never work & how to ensure that your child thrives

Learning doesn't have to hurt!

Success leads to more success!

• Damaged goods

The majority of kids leave kindergarten believing they are damaged goods. They mostly learn what is wrong with them, what they can't do, what they will never accomplish. They grow up to be adults who believe they are not capable and can't do much.

• #1 Requirement for learning

Learning can not occur if the student doesn't have emotional safety. Fear produces cortisol, adrenalin and noradrenalin. This shuts down the frontal lobe and the learning zones of the brain.

• Bell Curve

Only 3 to 5 students in a classroom get all the A's. The rest are doomed to be average or below average because of a bell curve that is based on a very narrow definition of intelligence.

• Reading & Writing

Most kids are not developmentally ready to read or write until they are 7 or 8 years old. The rods and cones of the eyes need to be ready to differentiate print and visual-motor skills must be in place.

• Disabilities or Learning Styles?

Dyslexia, ADHD, ADD...forget the labels and focus on learning success for every child!
